While Battle of the Beetles did not resonate with me in quite the same way that the previous instalments, it was still a great conclusion to the trilogy. It picked up shortly after Beetle Queen left off and hit the ground running, with Darkus and friends plotting to defeat the evil Lucretia Cutter, while Barty tried to subtly stop her from inside her compound.

Beetle fights usually take place on September to November, which coincides with the species' mating season. The arena is nothing more than a piece of log about a meter or so long. A small hole is made to house the female beetle in, whose scent instigates the opposing male beetles to lock horns and battle.

After each battle, each beetle has a 15 minute cooldown before they can battle again. This only applies to the beetles who participated in the battle, so if you have more beetles to battle, you can use them instead! This also means that if your beetle is challenged by an opponent, it will also be on cooldown.
